Well it is just pouring catz and dogz, isn't it?

Was he white? asked the fat holistic matron whose pink son had been robbed of his black leather jacket by three brown boys on the bus.

Was he asian? asked the hong kong hairstylist carefully .

He was as white as that loaf of bread.

Looking for clues in my answer. Not the answer but the clothes the answer could wear.

I bought this bread last week and -- look -- it is mouldy.
Can I help you?

Didn't catch him.

Your mother's arthritis is unbearable. In desperation, she reaches for a powerful prescription painkiller. WAIT! Instead you give her a batch of the natural painkilling ointment (described on PAGE 21) and apply it as directed. In minutes her pain is gone!

SUNDAY SPORTS

Your neighbor returns from vacation with poison ivy. No medication has relieved her itching, oozing blisters. She's miserable. HOLD ON! You pull a box of oatmeal from your kitchen cupboard and quickly concoct the remedy discussed on PAGE 497. The next day her sores have completely dried up. You're a hero!

BOOKS

After three weeks of grey bread, fried potatoes and vodka,
I took the train back to Paris. It was Sunday.

SUNDAY

About 6 a.m.

I pressed my nose to the pastry and chocolate shop windows. I smelled the coffee. I ate up the colours oozing through free market streets and advertising.
The streets were empty except for me, the homeless, the drunk
Even the beggars were sleeping.

same time

I bring home books from the library
about mothers who are astronauts, judges, dentists, truck drivers.
My 4 year old daughter wants frilly dresses, lipstick,
perfume, party shoes and stockings.
When I grow up,
she says,
I want to get married
and be a mama.

best friend has died.

I bicycle past liquor stores and cry. The bus stops in front of the wine store

and I stare thru the bus window
into the wine display window. The clerk waves.

I wave back. We pull away.
